Bill Murray, Chloe Sevigny and Adam Driver in "The Dead Don't Die."

FOCUS FEATURES

Chloe Sevigny talks climate change denial and 'The Dead Don't Die'

The actress stars in the new zombie horror-comedy from Jim Jarmusch. PAT KING

It's hard not to get caught up with how scary the current environmental crisis facing our suffering planet is. While many people do their best to make a difference in their day-to-day lives, given their good intentions, they still want to believe that it is all going to work out in the end. In the new zombie horror-comedy "The Dead Don't Die" by indie-cinema auteur Jim Jarmusch, the filmmaker poses this question over and over again: What if we're already too far gone to turn back?

The film is centered around three police officers in the town of Centerville, played by Bill Murray, Adam Driver and Chloe Sevigny as they try to battle off a horde of the living dead that have risen from the grave after energy companies have caused the Earth to stop moving on its axis through "polar fracking." While Driver's character, Ronnie Peterson, keeps trying to hammer the severity of the situation across by refraining in a classic Jarmusch deadpan, "This is not going to end well," Sevigny's Mindy Morrison chooses to keep her head dug into the sand, believing that the evil will all go away — a feeling that mirrors that of many people who choose to disengage with our current situation.

"I was thinking about a lot of those people that are just in denial," says Sevigny, of channeling that kind of misplaced optimism, as we meet in a hotel suite on a rainy day in SoHo. "Then again, she is driving a Prius and she's probably doing her part but she's not fighting capitalism, which is probably the only way. Jim likes to say the environmental crisis isn't political. But to me, it is. How are we going to change policies? That is the only way we are going to make some sort of big shift. Of course it's not political in the fact that yes, we all have to accept that this is happening. It's daunting and it's frightening. How does one do that? I compost, I recycle, I try to not use single-use plastic, which is really hard. I'm thinking before every purchase, before I get a disposable fork, to even eat with my hands if I can. Garbage gives me untold anxiety. But, I fly all of the time [laughs]! So, how can we make a difference? It's terrifying."

As a strong presence on- and offscreen, Sevigny had a hard time playing into this kind of "damsel in distress" character for the film, but ultimately knew that she would be in the right hands under the direction of Jarmusch.

GETTY IMAGES

"I was really nervous that I was going to be the one that nobody was going to pay attention to," says Sevigny. "I thought he was writing to everyone's strengths and I was like, what are my strengths? What is he writing here? Who is this person? She is a trope, but it was very hard to access her for me. I was really nervous that I was going to look like I was in a different movie. I was really insecure on the set, actually. Because they are all doing this one thing and I am here trying to keep alive this other thing. I just had to put my trust in Jim and hope he wouldn't make me look like an a—hole [laughs]."

The film boasts one of the most star-studded and flat-out "cool" casts that Jarmusch has ever assembled onscreen, which is saying something for him. Stars and well-known faces like Selena Gomez, Steve Buscemi, Tilda Swinton, Iggy Pop, Tom Waits and RZA all show up for memorable performances. For Sevigny, she had no idea what the cast would be like going into the film. But given Jarmusch's track record, he always gets an automatic "yes" when he offers her a role.

"I don't know if he said anything about the casting," she says. "He sent me a letter and he said he wanted to make a ridiculous zombie movie. ... But I always know that he gets great casts. Over and over, through all of his movies, half of it is the casting. I said I would sign on even before reading the script."

For Sevigny, being around Tilda Swinton, who plays the otherworldly samurai-sword-wielding Scottish mortician Zelda Winston, was like being in contact with life from another planet. But overall, the friendly atmosphere showed through from a cast of characters who have remained in Jarmusch's orbit throughout the years.

"She is like a creature from another planet," says Sevigny of Swinton's alien elegance. "Just being around her. Just her stature and the way she moves and seeing her wielding that sword ... I was just in awe of her and the way she communicates with people. Of course, she had worked with Jim before, and he has most of the same crew around, so she knew all of the people. Same with Adam and same with Bill, and a little bit with me. I had worked with Fred Elms before on "Broken Flowers." It's very easygoing. We're all in the flow. Therefore, there's an ease and a casualness. It's nice."

"The Dead Don't Die" will rise from the grave and hit theaters on Friday, June 14.

BEST PRESENTATIONS OF E3 2019

MCLAREN MADE OF LEGO

Xbox is not inside the Convention Center this time. However, it took its party to the Microsoft Theater. And that did not stop the company: It released a new generation console project that will arrive in 2020. Its presentation, which included the illustrious presence of the actor Keanu Reeves, also featured a rather unusual vehicle: a sports McLaren with chassis composed of Lego bricks.

FAYERWAYER

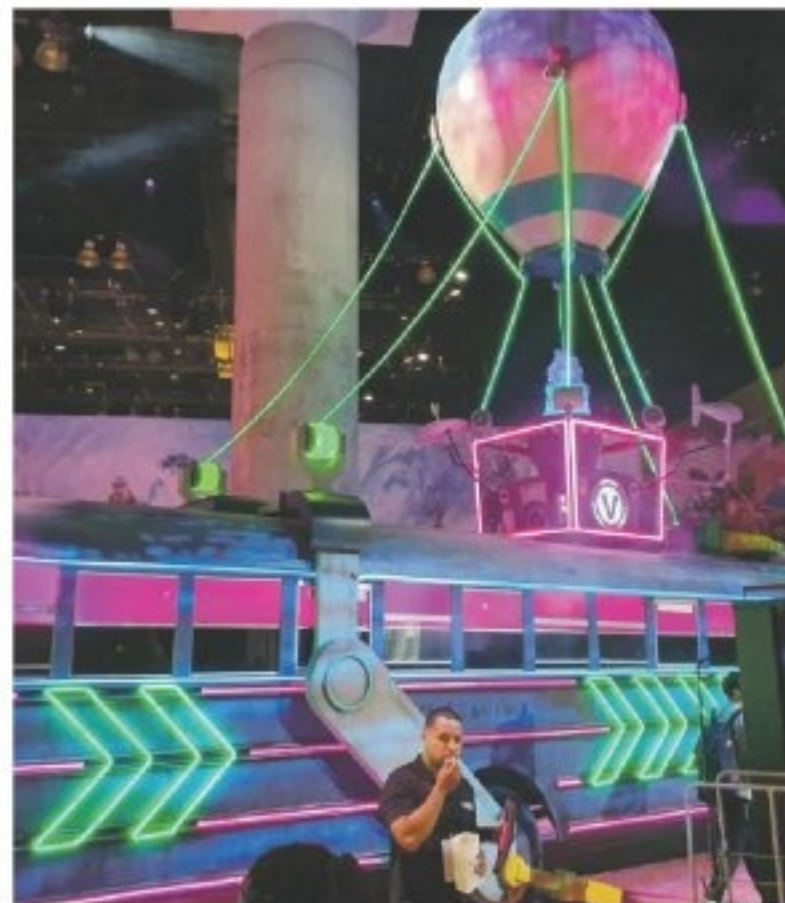

The largest video game fair in the world, Electronic Entertainment Expo (E3), has everyone in Los Angeles with a joystick in their hands. From presentations by industry giants such as Xbox or Nintendo, to creative experiences of independent creators, this week is all about games, games and more games. Even cinema stars have come to visit the June 11-13 event that brings together business, entertainment and lots of fun.

NORMAN GUTIÉRREZ, METRO WORLD NEWS

BIZARRE VIDEO GAMES

In the independent games section, there is one standing out, probably for the worst possible reasons. It is called Speaking Simulator. Users play as a robot that seeks to infiltrate human society, and must move the jaw of the cyborg to imitate human speech just using the keyboard and mouse. The challenge is not to be discovered, and to learn to move the virtual version of a mouth in the most bizarre way possible.

FLYING BUS

There is no doubt that Fortnite has become a new video game classic, with millions of players enjoying it all over the world. Thus, this time Epic Games brought to E3 a real party with many teams, dancing characters and nothing more and nothing less than a flying bus from the game, parked inside the fair.

NINTENDO DOES NOT GIVE UP

Of the three largest video game companies, the only one present at the fair is the Japanese Nintendo. It presented the new Pokémon double pack called "Shield and Sword," a series of beautiful dioramas of the remake of "The Legend Of Zelda: Link's Awakening," and a life-size figure of Luigi, which once again becomes a protagonist of a new adventure called "Luigi's Mansion 3."

Wilco's Glenn Kotche on the band's inventive Solid Sound Festival

The festival returns later this month to MASS MoCA.
PAT KING

It's okay to not be a fan of overcrowded summer music festivals. They're really not for everyone, and having played their fair share of big, overblown impersonal fests over the years indie-rock greats Wilco have been trying to redefine what they can be with their long-running Solid Sound Festival at MASS MoCA in North Adams, Massachusetts.

Started in 2010, the festival has been put on by the band almost every other year at the large modern-art museum for three full days of bands, comedians, art installations and one-of-a-kind performances, hand-picked by the band members themselves.

"There are a lot of really, really big festivals in the world now. But the big festivals, to me, I don't think they are very musical," explains Jeff Tweedy, the chief singer and songwriter of Wilco, in the documentary "Every Other Summer," about the creation of the festival. "The only real desire was to make a festival that we wouldn't be miserable at."

This year, the festival will include performances by Wilco (playing two sets), Courtney Barnett, The Feelies, Tortoise (playing two sets), Jonathan Richman, Cate Le Bon, The Minus 5, and Clipping, as well as many of the band's various side projects including a set from Jeff Tweedy & Friends. The festival also boasts an impressive comedy lineup including John Hodgman, Aparna Noncherla, Jean Grae, Rhea Butcher, and the Doughboys.

According to the band's drummer, Glenn Kotche, this attention to building a festival that represents the band's individual interests and personalities gives fans a real glimpse into what makes Wilco one of the most unique and inventive American bands of the past three decades.

"One of the cool things about Wilco and our sound is that it's informed by who we are as individuals," explains Kotche by phone. "We're still mainly a vehicle for Jeff's lyrics. But all of our outside experiences over the years contribute to how the music keeps evolving and changing and what we bring to the band as well. It's so cool that we get to showcase those other sides of our musical interests at Solid Sound because the rabid fans can see how, 'Oh, that makes sense how that informs this and this,' and how it all pieces together to become what Wilco is. I really love that we're able to show all sides of the band."

One of Kotche's explorations at this year's festival, outside of performing with the band, will be his multimedia performance "Fishing" with actor Jon Hamm and dancer and director Danielle Agami. The performance will consist of Kotche performing an original score, with instruments that will also be found in his Sensory Percussion installation in the museum, with Hamm acting out a series of monologues and Agami performing moving pieces of choreography.

"None of us knew what it would be," Kotche says with a laugh. "It's like a really interesting, bizarre theater piece. The chemistry is great and I'm glad we get to do it at Solid Sound."

While Wilco is currently hitting the road for the first time since 2017 leading up to Solid Sound, the band generally tries to give longtime fans special, one-of-a-kind shows each year. In the past, they have done full album performances, dusted off rarities, and in one case, played a marathon all-covers set. This year, the band will be playing a special "Live Band Karaoke" set where fans can get up onstage and take a shot at the vast Wilco songbook.

"Nothing's off limits. Just because we haven't [played songs at] shows in the past, we're excited to play the entire catalog," says Kotche. "We'll be ready for whatever they throw at us."

The Solid Sound Festival will be at MASS MoCA from June 28-30. For more information, head over to solid-soundfestival.com.

Aries Lessons from the past will help you recognize a problem you face. A heart-to-heart talk with a loved one will encourage honesty and produce a plan for the future.

Taurus Make things happen. Your intelligence and stamina will encourage others to help you reach your goal. Be sure to offer something in return so that you don't feel beholden.

Gemini Don't let an outsider interfere in your life. An offer is useful only if it comes to fruition. Don't commit to anyone or anything before you find out what's involved.

Cancer Your intuition will not let you down. Alter your life to eliminate negativity and promote the confidence required to pursue your dream. Loving yourself is a good place to start.

Virgo Do whatever it takes to resolve an emotional issue. Refuse to let anyone manipulate you. Do what feels right and best for you. You are in charge of your happiness.

Libra Self-improvement should be a priority. Evaluate your current state of mind and find out what it will take to lift your spirits and boost your confidence. Romance is highlighted.

Scorpio If you speak up, you will make headway. If you want to do things differently, make a move or change your lifestyle, now is a good time to make it happen.

Sagittarius You know what's best for you, so don't let someone else dictate what you should do. A healthy, moderate lifestyle will keep you moving in the right direction. Love is in the stars.

Capricorn Make changes that will add to your comfort and bring you closer to the people you love. An agreement will be honored.

Red Line delays expected for foreseeable future: MBTA

Infrastructure damage caused by Tuesday's derailment will slow things down for a while.

Trains are running again on the Red Line, but MBTA officials warn that travel times will continue to be longer than usual for the foreseeable future because of significant infrastructure damage caused by Tuesday's derailment.

General Manager Steve Poftak said Tuesday that signal bungalows near the JFK/UMass stop were damaged by the derailed train, and in a Wednesday series of tweets, the official MBTA account said that crews stationed along the tracks will need to direct traffic manually until the system is repaired.

As a result, trains that serve passengers on a line that runs from Braintree through Quincy and Dorchester and into Boston Cambridge and Somerville will move more slowly than usual, and electronic countdown clocks will remain inactive across the Red Line.

"Looking ahead, bungalows will need to be rebuilt, new signals & cables installed, tracks repaired. At this time, we can't say how long that will take," the MBTA wrote. "For now, trains will continue to travel at slower speeds. We ask customers to allow extra time & use all available services."

An MBTA spokesman said Wednesday that there is still no estimate of what full repairs will cost.

Shuttle buses replaced Red Line service between North Quincy and JFK/UMass for part of Wednesday to allow for maintenance work, but trains began running in both directions by 1:45 p.m.

Tuesday's derailment was the second on the MBTA's passenger lines in less than a week and the fourth this calendar year. In response, officials hired LTK Engineering Services to conduct an outside review of all derailments in the past two years.

Five arrested, gun recovered in Big Papi shooting in Dominican Republic

Police in the Dominican Republic have arrested five people in the shooting of former Boston Red Sox star David Ortiz in a plot that authorities on Wednesday said was more complex than originally thought.

The arrests came as Ortiz, 43, recovered in a Boston hospital following a second round of surgery on Tuesday, according to his family, which said he was sitting up and had taken a few steps.

The plot to kill Ortiz, a national hero in the Dominican Republic, involved two men on a motorcycle working with two other groups of people in cars, said National Police Chief Ney Aldrin Bautista Almonte.

He also said the gun used in the shooting had been recovered.

"It didn't just involve two people, more people took part," Bautista told a press conference, adding that another person linked to the plot nicknamed "The Surgeon" still remained at large.

Ortiz, widely known as "Big Papi," is a sports legend in Boston for his role in three World Series baseball championships as well as his profane and inspiring remarks in the days after the 2013 Boston Marathon bombing.

He retired in 2016 after hitting 541 career home runs, which ranks 17th all-time in Major League Baseball.

Ortiz was shot in the torso on Sunday evening while seated at an open-air nightclub in Santo Domingo, the capital of his native country, after the gunman rolled up on a motorcycle. Ortiz's friend Jhoel Lopez, a television host, was also wounded in the shooting.

Feliz's mother, Justina Garcia

Police quickly arrested one suspect, identified as Eddy Feliz Garcia, who was detained and beaten by bystanders at the scene.

2ND SURGERY IN BOSTON

Ortiz underwent a first round of surgery in Santo Domingo late on Sunday before being flown the following day to Boston's Massachusetts General Hospital, where he underwent more surgery.

A trauma and acute care surgeon was leading the team treating Ortiz, his wife, Tiffany Ortiz, said in a statement on Wednesday.

On Tuesday "and this morning, David was able to sit up as well as take some steps," she said on Wednesday. "His condition is guarded and he will remain in the [intensive care unit] for the coming days, but he is making good progress toward recovery."

Feliz appeared in court on Tuesday evening, charged with being an accomplice in the attempted murder of Ortiz. His lawyer, Deivi Solano, told reporters outside the court that the judge had agreed to postpone a hearing until Wednesday afternoon.

Justina Garcia, the mother of Feliz who remained in custody, told reporters the charges against her son were a "lie."

"They can't link it to him because he is not a criminal," she said. REUTERS

Ideas for your family vacation in Miami

Surprise! Florida's hub for culture and cool is also kid-friendly. JODI MAILANDER FARRELL

Miami boasts a global reputation for its nightlife and arts scene, but the city is also packed with entertaining and enriching things to do as a family. Year-round subtropical warmth makes it a great getaway for making lifetime memories.

And there's an added benefit: Miami's diverse Latin American and Caribbean heritage translates into great opportunities to introduce children to different cultures.

Art
The former warehouse district of Wynwood is now a trendy, walkable 'hood perfect for exposing kids to the gritty art of graffiti (which also makes eye-catching backdrops for family photos). Wynwood Walls, 2520 NW 2nd Ave., is a good starting point. The ever-changing outdoor collection of huge, colorful murals by street artists from around the world is free and open to the public.

Before it turns into an adult block party after 10 p.m., Wynwood Yard, 56 NW 29th St., also is an inventive outdoor hub for kids to run around. There's an edible garden, music, a bar for parents, food trucks, and pop-up craft and food vendors selling everything from mac-and-cheese and empanadas to smoothies and vegetarian dishes. Taking a cue from Disney's FastPass, there's even a free food-ordering app called The Wynwood Yard, so you can avoid standing in line.

For dessert, cruise by the Asian-inspired food hall called 1-800-LUCKY at 143 NW 23rd St. to try its famous Taiyiki ice cream, served in fun, Instagram-ready, koi fish-shaped cones.

Film & Music

Miami Beach's SoundScape Park, 400 17th St., is a modern, landscaped space that's the perfect perch for viewing films and concerts projected onto the New World Center's soaring 7,000-square-foot outdoor wall. From November through May, free WALLCAST classical music concerts by New World Symphony mean you can grab a blanket and watch your kids do cartwheels while Beethoven and Brahms fill the air. During the same period, free movies – from favorites like "Big" and "Edward Scissorhands" to new releases – are offered at 8 p.m. on Wednesdays. Check the latest schedule here.

Family Beaches

Matheson Hammock Park, 9610 Old Cutler Rd., in the Miami suburb of Coral Gables is a favorite retreat for locals with young children because it has a shallow, wave-free lagoon with lifeguards.

On nearby Key Biscayne, Bill Baggs Cape Florida State Park, 1200 Crandon Blvd., has a stretch of sand regularly named one of the Top 10 beaches in the United States. The state park also has a historic lighthouse with tours, two outdoor restaurants, and bike rentals, including surreys that seat four to six people. You can catch a view of Miami's Stiltsville, a collection of wood stilt houses in Biscayne Bay, from the wooded bike path.

In Miami Beach, Sabrina's Adaptive Beach, 6500 Collins Ave., is an accessible beach with an inclusive playground. The park has a tailored, ADA-accessible dune crossing so people of all ages and abilities can enjoy the ocean.

Extraordinary Pools

One of the most beautiful public pools, the historic, 1923 Venetian Pool at 2701 DeSoto Blvd. in Coral Gables is worth the drive to the suburbs. It's a spring-fed coral rock quarry with waterfalls and cave-like grottos patrolled on busy days by lifeguards riding surfboards. It's a diaper-free facility so children under the age of three are not allowed in the park.

If you have a little one, Flamingo Park, 999 11th St., in Miami Beach has the pool for you. Its aquatic center has a zero-depth entry play pool perfect for wading with babies and toddlers.

Young thrill seekers will enjoy the water slides, lazy river and splash pools of Grapeland Water Park, 1550 NW 37th Ave., near Miami International Airport.

Food Culture

Head to Calle Ocho (8th Street) in Little Havana for a taste of Latin cuisine. Versailles, 3555 SW 8th Street, is the mirror-lined, Cuban equivalent of Denny's, with tropical fruit shakes, media noche ham-and-pork sandwiches, croquettes and plantains.

For dessert, sample the Latin-infused scoops at Azucar Ice Cream Company 1503 SW 8th St.,

known for flavors derived from Cuban coffee, key limes, caramel flan, sweet corn and calabaza. Be sure to snap a family photo in front of the tiny shop's colorful painting of Celia Cruz, the most popular Latin artist of the 20th century, known for her catch phrase, ¡Azúcar! (sugar).

In Miami's Little Haiti neighborhood, the Little Haiti Cultural Complex's Caribbean Marketplace, 5925 NE 2nd Ave., features dishes by Latin and Caribbean celebrity chefs every second Friday of the month.

'Indoor Kid Zones

Seek out air-conditioned fun at Miami's many indoor escapes. Hands-on experiments, a touch tank, planetarium, local birds of prey exhibit and a stunning, three-story aquarium make for an all-ages retreat in downtown Miami at the Frost Museum of Science, 1101 Biscayne Blvd.

Next door at the Perez Art Museum, 1103 Biscayne Blvd., ask at the front desk for a Family Pack, which includes activity sheets, pencil kits, puzzles and scavenger hunts to explore the galleries.

For kids 10 and under, a play cruise ship, supermarket and kid-sized TV studio are part of the fun at Miami Children's Museum, 980 MacArthur Cswy.

Thrill seekers will want to head back to Wynwood for FunDimension, 2129 NW 1st Ct., an indoor playground packed with arcade and virtual reality games, laser tag, bumper cars, and a bungee dome.

Animal Life

Ever felt a giraffe's 18-inch prehensile tongue curl around your hand? At Zoo Miami's Samburu Giraffe Feeding Station, families stand on a tall wooden platform to get eye-to-eye and feed greens by hand to a herd of African giraffes. There are also camel rides and more than 2,000 animals at the cage-free attraction, 12400 SW 152nd St., the largest tropical zoo in the continental United States.

In Everglades National Park, discover alligators, great blue herons and other native species in the wild by renting bikes for the 15-mile, paved trail or taking the two-hour tram tour inside the park's Shark Valley, 36000 SW 8th St., a 50-minute drive from downtown Miami.

Back in the city, Jungle Island eco-adventure park at 1111 Parrot Jungle Trail, between Downtown Miami and South Beach, brings parrots, lemurs, sloths and other animals up close for interactive encounters. There's also a 22-acre rainforest, an 80-foot high zipline and free-flight wind tunnel.

Nearby, Miami Seaquarium, 4400 Rickenbacker Causeway, offers swim-with-dolphin (or seal) encounters, touch pools and sea life exhibits.

Sox need strong weekend

Sox need to clean up against the Orioles in Baltimore.

matthew.burke@metro.us

The Red Sox will wrap up their series with the Rangers on Thursday (7 p.m., NESN) before they get to kick their feet up in Baltimore this weekend.

The Sox absolutely need to take advantage of the fact that they are playing the worst team in baseball this weekend in Maryland or they will be in danger of falling behind the Yankees and Rays by 10 games or more.

Things have been mighty ugly for Alex Cora's crew of late as they've lost five of their last six games. The rough patch has been due, in large part, to serious competition as the Rangers look to be a legit contender and the Rays - who the Sox faced in the series prior - are top notch as well.

This year the Sox have shown that they can play the role of a bully pretty well, though. They swept the lowly Royals in Kansas City to start the month of June, putting up 23 runs total in the three-game sweep. They are also 4-3 so far this season against the basement-dwelling O's.

The Boston rotation will look like this over the next three days: David Price (4-2, 2.70 ERA) vs. Rangers Thursday, Eduardo Rodriguez (6-4, 5.00 ERA) Friday night against Baltimore and Chris Sale Saturday afternoon vs. the Orioles. The Sox haven't yet named a starter for Sunday's series finale in Baltimore.

The Sox could really use another strong performance from Price Thursday at Fenway. The veteran lefty has quietly been having an outstanding year so far as he hasn't allowed more than two earned runs in a game since May 2. In his last five starts, Price has given up a grand total of three earned runs.

"It's what I expect of myself. I don't care how I'm getting guys out, I just want to get them out," Price said earlier this month after beating the Yankees in the Bronx. "We're better than our record is, I think we all understand that. We look to continue to play good baseball."

Rodriguez, meanwhile, has been up-and-down of late. He allowed four earned runs in 5.2 innings in a loss to the Rays last weekend but was excellent against the Royals five days earlier, giving up just two earned runs in an 8-3 Boston victory.

As for Sale, it looks like he's finally settling down as he's pitched back-to-back gems. In victories over the Royals and Rangers, the Boston ace allowed a combined six hits.

NO THANKS WHEN IT COMES TO A.D.

This is going to sound crazy. But I'm all set with Anthony Davis in Boston.

I've touched upon this before, last month, when explaining why I believe the Kyrie Irving experiment with the Celtics needs to end, for both the player and the team. I said that with a willingness to move ahead with the kids, as in Jayson Tatum, Jaylen Brown, and yes, even Terry Rozier.

Actually, it's not just a willingness. It's a desire, and quite possibly, a need.

I need to see what that group can do, without Irving. And now, I'm telling you that I need to see what that group can do without Davis.

Earlier this week, ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski reported that New Orleans Pelicans executive vice president of basketball operations David Griffin has already got the ball roll-the Los Angeles Lakers or the New York Knicks.

That certainly isn't going to help Griffin and the Pelicans, who, according to Wojnarowski's league sources, are asking for "an All-Star player, a young player with All-Star potential, and two first-round picks." Multiple reports also have the Celtics as one of the team's that may be willing to gamble and trade for Davis, even if it's just for one year, a la Toronto's trade for Kawhi Leonard.

That would be dumb, in my opinion. And please, don't try to compare a Davis trade to the Kevin Garnett trade. These are two different situations, whether you like it or not.

Boston and Minnesota only agreed to a Garnett trade back in 2007 because the Celtics were able to get Garnett to agree to an extension. The initial trade that was agreed upon by both the Celtics and Timberwolves was taken off the table because Garnett told the Celtics he didn't want to play in Boston. Then, after the C's traded for Ray Allen, they got Garnett's full attention and made the blockbuster deal happen.

Would Davis be willing to show the same interest in an extension with the Celtics? It certainly doesn't sound like it. But even if he does, I'm all set. And yes, I understand that sounds crazy.

But another reason why this doesn't compare to the Garnett trade is because Garnett at least did everything he could for the organization that drafted him. He spent 12 seasons in Minnesota and led the Timberwolves to the playoffs eight years in a row. The deepest he got was the Western Conference Final in 2004. But there's no denying that he earned the right to seek a trade to put himself in a better position to win an NBA Championship before it was too late.

Davis? He's spent seven seasons in New Orleans and has gone to the playoffs only twice. That's not to say he doesn't have a "right" to ask for a trade. He has every right to do that. But it just seems as if he gave up on his team a whole year-and-a-half before his contract with that team was up. It certainly doesn't feel like he shed the same blood, sweat, and tears that Garnett did with Minnesota.

And if you've been following the Celtics, it seems they're about to lose an All-Star player in Irving who doesn't want to be a Celtic. So why should they spend valuable energy and assets to run out and acquire another? Especially when you have a group of kids who, last year, led the C's to Game 7 of the Eastern Conference Final.

Keep the kids. Pass on Davis. You might be surprised with the result.
